Dear Dr. Baruch:

As I told you in our telephone conversation a short time ago, I had just received your proposals back in my office after their careful consideration by several components of this Agency.

Your proposals have been read with considerable interest and some of the ideas contained therein have been found most stimulating. However, it is the consensus of those who studied your suggestions that they have no practical application to our work at the present time.

As you suggested, if you will let me know when you are planning to come to Washington, I will be very happy to make arrangements for you to see some of our people who would be most directly interested in the application of your proposals in this particular field.

Sincerely,

Signed
